Let's Start!

Have we remembered everything?

Learning Outcome

Accurately use information about common technology in communicative situations.

Ask your partner:

- Do you pay attention to details? Why or why not?
- What kind of last minute details do you need to review before an important event?

Can Do Statements

- I can talk about experiences I have or haven't had.
- I can deal with a communication breakdown.
- I can talk about jobs and work.

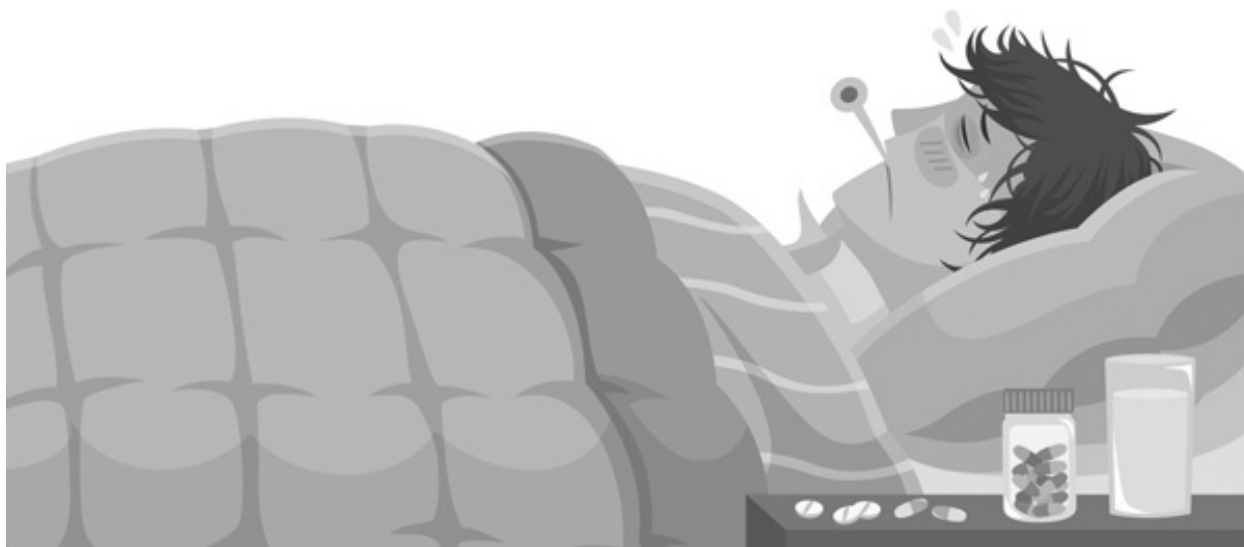

Let's Explore!

It's hard to count on someone who's fickle!

* A "fickle" person often and unexpectedly changes his or her mind.

Instructions: Read the text aloud.

- Miranda: I think we've gotten everything in place. You're feeling comfortable with our plans, aren't you?
- Peter: No, our MC has cancelled at the last minute due to illness. He's struggled with his health before.
- Miranda: Do you mean Tony's been ill for some time? That explains why his schedule has been so free.
- Peter: Are you saying he's indicated to you that his schedule was free? I guess he was hopeful.
- Miranda: Well, we need a backup plan. Ever since Ferdinand's mentioned the simultaneous broadcast in Sao Paulo, I've been thinking of Ricardo Verde.
- Peter: You mean the old guy, or his son?
- Miranda: Oh, his son would never do. He's always been fickle. He's the type who could forget to show up for an event and ask for payment.
- Peter: Well, they both have charisma and are great with an audience. Does that mean you have planned to contact him or should I?
- Miranda: Leave it to me. I'll touch base with him. I've had a few dealings with him in the past. Or did you want the opportunity to meet him?
- Peter: Oh, I'll get a good view of him at the event. I know he'd do a first-rate job at the party if he agrees, but I think I'd enjoy him better at a distance.

Learning Points

Present Perfect

The Present Perfect is a combination of the present tense and the perfect aspect.

The tense demonstrates the position of an event or action in time. In the Present Perfect, you use a present tense (has/have) because the action happened close to the present and has connection to the present.

The aspect refers to how you should view the event in relation to time (in other words the perspective). In the Present Perfect, you use a Perfect aspect - the end of the action is known and is used to emphasize the fact that the action is complete.

The Present Perfect is used to express a past event that has present consequences.

We use the Present Perfect to:

1. Talk about finished actions with a result in the present.

He's canceled his appearance. (He's not coming.)

We've gotten everything ready for the event. (You can see now that it's all done.)

2. Talk about an action when the time is not important.

I've had to deal with him before.

He's suggested that he was available.

3. Talk about a single or repeated action in the past.

He's struggled with his health before.

Asking for Clarification

Sometimes you don't understand what was said or something was not clear to you. It is, therefore, important to express your lack of understanding and seek clarification from the person you are talking to. Here are some ways you can ask for clarification.

1. Use a tag question.

You're feeling good about this plan, aren't you?

2. Use the phrases "do you mean ... ", "are you saying ... ", "does that mean ... " or "or did you ... " and the information you need clarification on.

Do you mean he's not going to be our master of ceremonies?

Does that mean we'll need to find someone else?

You mean he can't be our MC?

3. Use the informal phrase "You mean ... "

You mean he canceled his participation in the event?
